Ruth Jordan has over 20 years' experience in domestic and offshore commercial, trusts, civil fraud, tax, charities and insolvency litigation.

In addition to her private practice, she acts for the UK government in tax, trusts and insolvency matters. In this capacity, she appeared in the Supreme Court in Pitt v Holt and is currently instructed on the trust law aspects of a large number of tax appeals relating to the validity of remuneration trust tax avoidance schemes.

Ruth also has a busy administrative and public law practice. She is frequently instructed to advise and act in judicial review challenges to large-scale developments and infrastructure projects in The Bahamas and in other administrative, constitutional and commercial matters including arbitrations. She was specially admitted to the Bahamas Bar in 2021 to challenge oil exploration licences; and frequently appears in Privy Council appeals including a challenge in the Privy Council to security for costs orders in public interest litigation and an upcoming appeal involving the scope of vicarious liability for the tortious acts of public employees.

Currently instructed in PIFSS v Al Wazzan (one of the longest ever Commercial Court trials and one of The Lawyers' Top 20 Cases of 2025); in the Bourlakova litigation; and in an UNCITRAL arbitration between a Caribbean Government and the owner of a special economic zone.

Ruth is described in the directories as "straight talking, practical and commercial", as well as "creative and industrious" and with "huge technical expertise".
